

Digital Asset Checklist

Today, people have increasing amounts of digital assets stored either on home computers and laptops or online. These range from email and Facebook accounts, passwords for online accounts, to digital music and photo collections.

Like other assets, digital assets can be passed on to family or friends in you will. However, recent research shows that the majority of people have not considered passing on this information in the event of their death

Remember a Charity has developed the following checklist to help people start to consider what digital assets they own and how they would like to pass them on.

Use the checklist below to start recording your own digital assets and who you would like pass them on to.

1. Digital assets with financial value

Asset	Yes/No	Who would you like to pass it on to?
Bank account
Savings - e.g. ISAs
Share dealing account
Digital music collection (e.g. iTunes)
Paid-for "Apps" – e.g. for your smart phone/ iTouch
Online subscriptions e.g. Love Film, online publications etc
Online software and files
Domain registrations
Computer games
Other

2. Digital assets with emotional value

Asset	Yes/No	Who would you like to pass it on to?
Social networking site account (e.g.- Facebook, LinkedIn, YouTube, Twitter)
Online photo albums
Digital music collection (e.g. iTunes)
Content created by you - e.g. diary, blog, video, music
2 nd Life account
Other

3. Digital assets containing useful information

Asset	Yes/No	Who would you like to pass it on to?
Contacts (address book)
Information such as traditional family recipes
Important household information
Personal emails
Personal letters saved on computer
Other		